The Colonial Chronicle (ISSN 1528-8641) was an ambitious independent newsletter predominately about the American Revolution as a living history experience. After a period of experimentation, The Chronicle found its voice as an information vehicle that both educated and entertained readers. Contributors and readership alike joined in the fun, making The Chronicle a truly unique experience, giving its audience a detailed and light-hearted look at American history.

To honor this one-of-a-kind publication, the editors have published this exciting collection, imaginatively entitled The Greatest Hits of *The Colonial Chronicle, for your edification and enjoyment. All the original text remains, except for some very minor re-editing. Many of the graphics have been significantly improved. In addition, a new glossary of period terms used during the American Revolution or by today's living historians has been added to broaden the book's appeal.

Philip D. Weaver has been an active living historian since the start of the American Revolution Bicentennial. As a member of the well known Brigade of the American Revolution, he served in their Office of the Brigade Inspector for many years and was elected to the Brigade's Board of Directors for three consecutive terms. Mr. Weaver is also a highly regarded independent researcher. His articles on the colonial period and living history were first published nationally in 1979. A member of the Company of Military Historians since 1980, he was elected a Fellow of the Company in May of 2004.
